

Revue de presse ANGLAIS

Semaine du 09 au 15 février 2009

Time - February 09, 2009

Science

Stem Cells: Poised for a Breakthrough (The Well / Cover Story) (By Alice Park) After eight years of political ostracism, stem-cell scientists like Harvard's Douglas Melton are coming back into the light--and making discoveries that may soon bring lifesaving breakthroughs.

Society

Feeling Our Way Out of the Recession (By John Cloud) (Life / Psychology) Are you angry or sad about the economy? Good. How our emotions can help bail us out.

Business

Why Your Bank Is Broke (By Stephen Gandel) (The Well / The Economy) Sketchy loans, financial blunders and a string of bad bets have left America's banks nearly insolvent. How an industry collapsed--and why nationalization may be the only way to save it.

Newsweek - February 9, 2009

Periscope

Food crisis - Hunger May Be the Worst Fallout From the Recession (By Rana Foroohar) : Fears over global hunger are back, this time driven by both high food prices and plunging incomes. As the global recession deepens, unemployment is rising, but the price of staple foods is not falling with other commodities, like oil.

On Science

Of Voodoo and the Brain (By Sharon Begley) : Patterns of neural activity and thoughts or feelings are not as tightly linked as scientists have claimed.

Society and the Arts

Slum Voyeurism? (By Fareed Zakaria) : The director of the surprise hit 'Slumdog Millionaire' defends his film against Indian critics who say it exploits the poor.

The Guardian Weekly- 7 February- 14 February 2009

Cover

US launches a new age of diplomacy in Munich (Cover story)(By Ian Traynor) The Obama administration announces its desires for changes in foreign policy at the annual Munich conference

Weekly Review

Who is behind the trigger (By Luke Harding) : the shooting of a human rights worker is just the latests in a series of mysterious murders concerning Kremlin adversaries.

Second wife goes to law (By Rama Lakshmi) : duped Afghan bride follows her husband to India to seek. (p.27)

The New Scientist - February 14, 2009

Editorial

Drugs drive politicians out of their minds : Isn't it about time that the risks of ecstasy were judged against known dangers, not newspaper distortions and scare stories?

Environment

Climate models predicted Australian bushfires : Even early warning couldn't stop last weekend's bush fires in Victoria claiming 170 lives and over 700 homes

Society

What's in a kiss? : Kissing is set for world domination, but we need to do more to find out its true purpose.

The Economist - February 14th / Financial Times- February 14/15, 2009

Leaders

The middle class in emerging markets - Two billion more bourgeois : The rise of a new middle class has changed the world. What if they sink back into poverty?

Electronic books and newspapers - An iTunes moment? : The growing popularity of electronic books could offer hope for newspapers.

Europe

Charlemagne - English is coming : The adverse side-effects of the growing dominance of English.

United States

Politicians on Twitter - Tweeting the people : An internet craze reaches Congress.

Sex education - Just say no : Abstinence-only education is up for grabs under the new government.

The Americas

Antarctic tourism - Waiting for another Titanic : The risks of a holiday with icebergs.

Science

Animal behaviour : Decisions, decisions : What people can learn from how social animals make collective decisions.

Financial Times - February 9, 2009

Economy

Growth in Gulf states set to halve in 2009 (By Simeon Kerr) : Growth in Arab Gulf states will almost halve in 2009 on lower than expected oil prices amid the gloomiest global economic outlook in more than half a century, according to the IMF.

Financial Times - February 11, 2009

Personal Finance/Economy

Paul Moore's memo in full (By Paul Moore) : Memorandum from Paul Moore, Ex-head of Group Regulatory Risk, HBOS Plc.

Life and Arts

Growing up fast (By Lucie Greene) : Fashion designers tap into adult nostalgia for childhood brands.

A new leaf (By Andrew Jack) : the first synthetic cannabis-type drug has reached the streets and, for the moment, it's perfectly legal.

House and Home

Within these walls (By Katrina Burroughs) : gated communities have never been more popular.

Courrier International n° 954 du 12 au 18 février 2009

Amériques

Bolivie : les réserves de lithium aiguissent les appétits (By Simon Romero) : Japonais, Américains et Français s'intéressent de près à ce métal indispensable à leurs voitures électriques et autres gadgets électroniques. Mais le gouvernement d'Evo Morales veille. (The New York Times, New York)

Dossier « Merci la crise »

Une nouvelle ère de frugalité s'annonce (By Stefan Theil with William Underhill and Sophie Grove) : la récession bouleverse le mode de vie occidental fondé sur le crédit facile et la consommation effrénée. Et sans doute durablement. (Newsweek, New York)

Etats-Unis : le bricolage est de retour (By Cynthia Dizikes) : A travers tout le pays, les cours de plomberie, de couture et de jardinage peinent à satisfaire la demande. (Los Angeles Times, Los Angeles)

Econome mais pas radine (By Srah Freeman) : Ilona Richards se passe de chauffage, fait sa toilette dans l'évier et ne dépense pas plus de 1 euro par repas. Pour cette Britannique, c'est un choix. (Yorkshire Post, Leeds)

Multimédia

Télévision - Disney renonce enfin au conformisme (By Meg James and Dawn C. Chmielewski) : avec sa série sur la vie sexuelle des adolescents, ABC Family bouleverse la vision de la famille. Son succès illustre la nouvelle stratégie de la chaîne. (Los Angeles Times, Los Angeles)